CLASS HISTORY

FRESHMEN

The doors of the brand new high school opened and guess who arrived? Why it's the class of '57! Who else? We were definitely welcomed by the all glorious seniors who let us know just how pleased they were to see us. The frosh had finally arrived to carry their books in peach baskets, and perform jigs upon request. The seniors probably thought they could wear us down with their antics, but, of course, we survived. The final touch to that hap-hazard week was the traditional Freshmen Reception given by the seniors.

By the way, weren't we the young Frosh who brought a nice bundle of enthusiasm into the new school? Remember our first adventure, kids? It was our thank you dance for the Seniors. "Stag or drag, Fight or fall, Bring your Gal to the Frosh Brawl." Everything went well, and it turned out to be a real success. That year the little Freshmen surprised everyone by taking second place in the Magazine Drive.

SOPHOMORES

Our sophomore year rolled around pretty fast. By now we were old hands at such things as the Magazine Drive; and proceeded to take first place this year. Good group, that class of '57. At the same time, we were in the midst of a rumpus trying to change the dance style at B.H.S. The question was: "Shall it be modern or square?" The smoother dance style won. We proved our point when we presented "Moods In Music," a tremendous success.

JUNIORS

Our Junior year had its successes too. That year we presented the Junior Prom, entitled "Stairway to the Stars." The event was held in the cafeteria which was beautifully decorated in shades of blue and white. The King and Queen of the Prom distributed the long-awaited class rings to the Juniors.

SENIORS

Here we are Seniors! This year we initiated the freshmen who were a terrific bunch of sports. We're sure they had as much fun doing the stunts, as we had issuing them. In the fall we were busy collecting past dues and feverishly trying to raise money for a very expensive year. We came upon the idea of selling Christmas cards and wrappings; which netted us a tidy sum of money.

The spring season came upon us very quickly. It found us in the midst of planning our Senior Play, Senior Ball and the annual banquet.

As we walk down the aisle to the strains of "Pomp and Circumstance," memories of our high school years flash back in our minds. We remember the hard work, as well as all the fun; and yet, we know that graduation is not the end, but merely the beginning of another chapter in our lives.

CLASS PROPHECY

I

NARRATOR: This sketch is entitled "Berlin 57." The first scene reveals an ordinary school day. It is June 1957, just at the beginning of a first period class. The Physics Lab is on the left of the stage and the English room is on the right. In the English class some seniors are presenting their version of Shakespeare's Midsummer Night's Dream. Celia Kalencik, our director, is speaking to the cast. Let's listen:

CELIA KALENCIK: Imagine this classroom as Yukon Territory. Lying outside her igloo is Frances Thibault, Queen of the Yukon, who is under a magic spell. When she awakens, she will fall in love with the first living thing she sees, be it man or beast.

Ronald Stack, King of the Yukon, has planned that the Queen see Bottom, Raymond Aldrich. Ray is unaware that our King has placed a caribou hide over him.

RAY (Singing): The ostrich, who is brown of hue,
Has useless flapy wings;
The camel has his humps so true,
The buzzing bee his stings.

FRANCES: What angel awakens me from my sleep?

RAY: The beaver, squirrel, and rat
Are much inclined to gnaw;
The parakeet, and cat
Are much inclined to claw.

FRANCES: I'm in love with you. Take me away on your dog sled.

RAY: As soon as I call my trusty, husky, Rover.
BoooooooooooooooooooM!!!

NARRATOR: What exploded? What's the meaning of this disturbance?

PROFESSOR NOBLE (in physics lab): Wir haben success mit chemicals.

NARRATOR: What do you mean?

PROFESSOR MAIER: Wir machen disappearen powder, und it disappeared. (Laughs madly)

NARRATOR: What's so funny about that?

PROF. MAIER: Und mit it go das faculty, Gordon Davischmidt, Douglas Chasebachen, Robert Housemacher, und yet even, Donald Yale.

NARRATOR: I'm sorry this has happened. I'm afraid I chose an extraordinary day at Berlin High School.

I think, now, you would like to know a little more about our class — kind of historical account, you might say. I've asked Professor Cichowski of our class to sketch in a few details for you. Is the professor here? Professor Cichowski is a member of the Future Atom Splitters of America . . . a future holder of the Nobel Peace Prize, and a future research worker on the moons of Mars. At present he is concentrating on . . . nothing.

PROF. CICHOWSKI: Hmmm . . . let me see . . . as I evoke memories of the past four years I recall . . . we had a great class . . . too much studying . . . so many nice kids . . . too much studying . . . such wonderful parties . . . too much studying. More I do not remember.

NARRATOR: Well, thank you very much, Professor.

PROF. CICHOWSKI: Not at all, sir, not at all.

NARRATOR: Well, here come some of the senior girls — Nancy Ramy, Brenda Ziel, and Joan Woods, burdened down with last minute work. And there's our class secretary, Judy Bolles. Perhaps she can tell us something about the social life of our group. Judy? Judy? JUDY?

JUDY: I don't know if I'm coming or going! I've so much to do.

NARRATOR: Well, I guess that's all we're going to see of Judy! Now is there anyone in the audience who would like to ask anything about this class?

MELANIE BORGO: (From the back of the auditorium) Mr. Narrator, is there anyone in our class who might become the President of the United States?

NARRATOR: Could be. I know that Linda Vredenburgh and Elaine Mongillo are going to be teachers; I guess that leaves them out. Lenny Matyka always had a way with the women; maybe he has a chance.

(Bell rings) It's 2:45 and the school day is over. The Seniors are certainly in a rush to get to their marching practice. Whew!!

II

Graduation Day. The entire Senior Class is seated on the stage. The stage is dark. Students have just received awards. A few of the class members have come forward to receive honors. Many have remained seated.

NARRATOR: I wonder if awards really represent the best measure of determining an individual's worth. Are awards deserving of the emphasis that most people place on them? I wonder how the class members feel. Here come Barbara Labieniec and Alan Dickinson — let's ask them. (To Barbara) Barbara, because you and Alan are fine representatives of the Senior Class, I'd like to ask you for your opinion on a very controversial topic. How do you feel about the presentation of awards? Don't you feel that many worthy students are often forgotten?

BARBARA: Yes, I fully agree with you. I know of many people who would be more deserving of awards than I, if awards were based on disposition and personality. Unfortunately they aren't.

NARRATOR: Alan, how do you feel?

ALAN: Well, I believe that an award is a fine thing. If a person works hard and does well, I believe he should receive some token of appreciation. His accomplishments should be recognized. But I also agree with you that many people deserve recognition in fields that don't offer awards. In our class, there are many kind and unselfish people whom I will never forget, not because they received awards, but because they possess admirable traits of character.

NARRATOR: Very nicely said, Alan. I'm glad to see that both of you agree that awards are not as important as people sometimes think they are. I'm sure that many agree with you.

III

NARRATOR: The third scene takes place in 1967 — ten years after graduation. Along the street are such buildings as the town hall, the library, a church, a grocery store, and at the end of the street, the town bank. We have asked our former classmates to return to our town and take places corresponding to positions which they actually hold.

The narrator strolls down the street glancing at buildings and into store windows. A young man approaches the narrator. As he draws nearer we recognize Vic Lavender.

NARRATOR: Vic, what are you doing now?

VIC: Well, let me see. I've been the town judge here for almost eight years. You know these juvenile delinquents are really getting to be a problem in our town, but I have a great deal of help from Officers Bandarutis and Andros.

NARRATOR: Well, Vic, I'm sure you will be able to handle any problems that come your way. By the way, the reunion starts in about a half hour.

Narrator continues down street — passes library — turns back and goes into the building. Seated at the desk is Barbara Muchkor and she is talking to a gentleman. The gentleman turns and faces narrator.

NARRATOR: Hello, Mr. Tyburski. Are you still collecting research for your conservation project?

TOMMY: As a matter of fact I am. I've just come to the conclusion that horse manure is the best fertilizer a farmer can get and would produce much better products if it were used universally.

NARRATOR: I'm sure that has taken much study and observation on your part. You're coming to the reunion aren't you?

TOMMY: Yes, I'll be there in about 15 minutes. I have a little work to finish up.

NARRATOR: Fine, see you there.

(Leaves building and walks to the end of the street as far as the bank. He stops when he sees a girl dressed in furs come out of the bank).

NARRATOR: If it isn't Claire Begin. I wondered if you'd be able to come back for our reunion.

CLAIRE: Well, Ah made arrangements to postpone my personal appearances for the benefit of my dear 'ole classmates.

NARRATOR: We are very glad that you could make it. By the way, have you seen our former class president Ronny Zucchi? I want to ask him to conduct the reunion and maybe give a short speech.

CLAIRE: Why yas, Ah have. Ah just left him in the bank. He is taking his place here as bank president. Didn't you know?

NARRATOR: No I didn't, but thank you for telling me. (Narrator goes into the bank) Ronny, how good to see you again. I see you have become prosperous in the past ten years.

RONNY: Yes, I have had a lot of good luck. Well, what can I do for you? Do you want to deposit some money or take some out?

NARRATOR: Ha, ha, neither, I'm afraid. I just came over to ask you if you will preside at the reunion this afternoon and maybe give a welcome speech.

RONNY: Oh, the reunion, I almost forgot. Let me see, that means I'll have to break my appointment with Miss Worbel. But then again, she'll be going too, won't she?

NARRATOR: Yes, that's right, we'll see you there. (Narrator leaves bank and heads toward the town hall. Jim Newman and Barbara Wrobel walk down the street toward them. Narrator stops and they meet.)

NARRATOR: Well, congratulations Mr. and Mrs. Newman. Tell me why is it that you just got married. It's been ten years since you graduated.

JIMMY: Yes I know. But you see, I served eight years in the United States Navy; and I just got home about three months ago.

NARRATOR: I see, well, I wish you all the luck in the world. Say, do you remember Raymond LeBel? Well, he is running the Second National Store here. It's the only food store in town, and he has built up quite a thriving business.

RAYMOND: (Coming out of the store, smiling and wiping hands on his apron.) Hi, I'm almost ready to go. I just have to carry Mrs. Maier's groceries to her car. I read about the reunion in the paper, and I think it is just "ducky."

NARRATOR: Fine Ray, we're heading there now. Do you want to come along?

RAY: I'll meet you there.

(Jimmy Newman and Barbara Worbel continue toward the Town Hall. They leave the narrator.

Narrator: I have a few more stops to make — see you there.)

NARRATOR: I wonder which class member lives in this house? (He knocks) Hello, Miss Dyer, or is it Mrs. ? ? ?

SUSAN: Hello. As you can see, I'm a housewife. Won't you come in?

NARRATOR: Love to. Lovely home you have.

SUSAN: Thank you. You remember Elizabeth Erling, don't you? (As Elizabeth comes into the room.)

NARRATOR: Yes, what are you doing now, Elizabeth?

SUSAN: Drinking a cup of coffee.

NARRATOR: Oh—Well, I must be going. (He leaves and walks down Main Street.) It seems that some of our class have been successful in the field of business. (He continues looking into the stores on Main Street.) "Squillacote & Slowik, Classical Record Mart"; "Simcik & Smith Travel Agency"; "Scarola & Norman, High shoes for short girls." Well here we are at the Town Hall.

Let's join the reunion which is already in progress. Gathered here are members of the Class of 1957.

As I look around, I see Sandra Wind. She is now a veterinarian. In fact she operated on my pet snail last year.

I think you would be interested to know that Jay Ross is the Superintendent of Schools in Berlin now. Jay is at the reunion, so he can tell us what's going on at our Alma Mater. Jay, has anything exciting happened at the old school lately?

JAY: Nah — some kids threw a little "H" Bomb outside my house last night, if you can call that exciting.

NARRATOR: So the town is still quiet as ever! I can see a very distinguished-looking gentleman, but I don't remember his being in the Class of "57." Excuse me Sir, what is your name?

GENTLEMAN: Royal Lamkins.

NARRATOR: My, but you seem prosperous.

ROYAL: Oh, yes, I've had a good bit of luck — inherited the Royal Pudding Company, you know.

NARRATOR: Oh, of course. Oh, by the way, Arlene Martin asked me to tell you she wouldn't be here; she's dancing on a television program. It's too bad she couldn't be here for the talent show we're having. Lois Prudhon is starting off the show with a ghost story. Elaine Griffith will tell a few "traveling salesman" jokes. Barbara Varriale, who is now a missionary in Africa, will show slides; and Betty Keating will tell us about her interesting————Say, isn't that Ronnie Zucchi speaking?

ROYAL: Yes.

NARRATOR: Sounds interesting. Let's listen.

RONNIE: And so again, I want to welcome you on the behalf of the organizers of this reunion. And now I'd like to introduce you to a few of the celebrities our class has produced. First, Alfred Talbot, who's just recently published a book of poetry. Alfred, would you come forward, please? What was the first poem you ever wrote?

ALFRED: Hmmmmm . . . I believe it was "Ode to a Violet."

RONNIE: Where did you get your inspiration?

ALFRED: Oh, from one of my high school teachers. (Cheers from crowd.)

RONNIE: Thank you, Alfred. I believe we have another artist in this group, Malcolm Pabst, who is now a celebrated painter. Malcolm, what is the first picture you painted?

MALCOLM: I believe it was a picture of mangled food, entitled "Fourth Lunch."

RONNIE: I guess your inspiration is obvious to all the alumni of B.H.S.

Everyone remembers Norman King's singing voice. Norm is now a popular singing star. His latest record is "Rocket Roll", accompanied by the Swinging Blanchard Sisters.

I see that Maurice Tattersall is in this group. This is a rare privilege, indeed. He is a renowned teacher, lecturer, editor, and publisher in London. I'm sure you'd all like to hear a word from Maurice.

MAURICE: Cherrio, Old Top! !

RONNIE: Reginald Gorneault and Carol Buch are here from Paris. Carol, who recently made her debut at the Metropolitan, got her start at the Gorneault Oprea House.

Carol Flematti has just returned from Italy. I would enjoy hearing Carol's impressions of her trip, if she would oblige.

CAROL: You tryin' to flirt with me?

RONNIE: Nope! That's Edward Maguda standing with you isn't it?

EDWARD: Yes, Captain Edward Maguda.

RONNIE: Captain, you say?

EDWARD: Yes, H.M.S., "B.V.D." She's heading due west, making for the nearest shore.

RONNIE: I certainly hope she gets there Ed!

Jean Yacinski is here rehashing the Motif Club's Washington trip with Florence Tolomea and Dorothy Johanns. If I remember correctly, Jean was the president of that club, Dorothy was the treasurer, and Florence was the secretary.

There seems to be some confusion in the back of the hall. Jeff Arute our bouncer for this evening, is throwing out a hobo. Why it's Peter King! On his shoulder he is carrying the conventional hobo stick; but tied to the end, is an exceedingly large sack. Say Pete, what's in the sack? Let me peek in. Hello Mary Lou Cugno! Come out of that sack and join the reunion.

I see that Joan Munson is here this evening. I heard that she recently won a million dollars for a recipe. I'd like to know what she is going to do do with all that money. Joan, how are you going to spend that million dollars?

JOAN: I am taking cooking lessons at Janice Ferrero's cooking school.

RONNIE: Now I'd like to ask Gary Graziano, Olympic swimmer, to step up here for a minute. Tell us Gary, are you competing in the trials this year?

GARY: Yes, I am and because of the help of my competent coaches, Phyllis Peck and Nancy Rivers, I expect to win the title for the United States. (Loud cheering from the crowd.) I owe it all to Phyllis and Nancy.

RONNIE: The next person I know you all remember, Kenny Burt. He has been proclaimed the world's greatest detective because of his daring capture of Public Enemy No. 1. Please come up here Kenny.

KENNY: Thank you, one and all. Would anyone like to see my badge? (Laughter from crowd.)

NARRATOR: Thank you Kenny and Ronnie, and thank you everyone for your attention.

BOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOMMMMMMMMM ! ! ! (Loud explosion)

JAMES VARRICCHIONI: There has been an explosion at the High School. Th-The Chemistry Lab. Ronald Rich's work! (Everyone rushes out)

NARRATOR: Nothing ever changes!

FOOTBALL

This year Berlin High's spirited team had a three win and four loss record. Hit hard by graduation Berlin came on to win its first game 26-0 by beating Canton. Next, Berlin lost a 20-19 thriller to Simsbury who capitalized on Berlin's eleven fumbles. Berlin then beat Farmington at their opponents home field by a score of 12-0. Following a long trip to Griswold, Berlin bowed to them, 26-13. Playing the next game on our home field, Cheshire went down in the fourth quarter to a 12-7 loss and another win for us. At Plainville the boys from Berlin almost pulled an upset, leading 19-6 in the last quarter, but the Plainville co-champions scored three touchdowns and went on to win, 25-19. In the last game of the season, injury riddled Berlin went down to defeat in the rain as Gilbert won, 32-14.

Coach Landry and his assistant Joe Nuccio did a fine job with the boys this year!

Led by Henry Mora, Berlin breezed through competition and made the tournament only to lose, even though Mora pitched no-hit ball the whole game. Mora also pitched the last two games no-hit thus shutting out the opposition in the last three games and giving up not one hit.

Coach Gibney and his boys will be trying to win that championship again next year.
